Criminal Charge Against Mrs. Virginia W. Justh .-- A Sequel to the Old Divorce Suit.

A MIDWIFE'S STORY.

A Painful Chapter of Domestic Life as Told in a Country Court Room.

The case of Justh vs. Justh, in which the parties, man and wife, have been in the Courts for some time in cross-actions for diverce, has lately assumed a new phase. All the facts and circumstances connected with the original cause of action are, perhaps, only too well known in the circles in which the parties were wont to move and to adorn efore their unhappy litigation. It would be useless now to recapitulate them, as they are only too fresh in the public mind. Mr. and Mrs. Justh separated about three years ago, on a mutual understanding, or, it might be rather said, misunderstanding. However this may be, they had separated on certain conditions which each bound himsell and herself to observe. The lady during this time, with the three children of her marriage with Mr. Justh, principally resided at Clear Lake cottage, Oyster Bay, the property of her husband. For a time nothing seemed to interiere with the fulfilment of the conditions mutually agreed upon between them. After a long sojourn in Europe Mr. Justh returned to New York, and soon after, from information which he received, he commenced a suit against his wife for livorce. This led to a cross-suit by the wife against the husband, said suits being still pending in the Supreme Court of this city. The lady still occupied cottage at Oyster Bay, and still had the control of the children. It was white living here the party implicated with her—one Colonel John L. is supposed to have made the acquaintance of Mrs. Justh. This party was altogether unknown to the husband; but it was eventually on account of his wife's intimacy with him that Justh founded his charge of adultery. The parties only awaited the law's delay for the settlement of their cross-actions when a fresh suspicion of still further criminality on the part of his wife with Burleigh was aroused, and which, from subsequent inquiry and alleged facts, grew strong as proof of Holy Writ in the breast of Mr. Justh, This resulted in the present

In this the people of the State of New York are the prosecutors and Mrs. Justh the defendant, the charge being that she had submitted to an operation dangerous to the life of the child with which she was at the time, as alleged, enceinte by the aforesaid Burleigh. Information on this serious charge came unexpectedly to Mr. Justh, and was given unwittingly on the part of his informant, the party who has since become State evidence against the lady, her whilom patient. THE PROCEEDINGS on this criminal charge were commenced on Wednesday last at the Town Hall at Jamaica, Long Island, the alleged offence having been committed at Oyster Bay, within the jurisdiction of Queens county. A great deal of interest is manifested in the proceedings, from the high station occupied in society by the Jusths. Mr. Justh is a wealthy banker, and his wife a lady not only of most attractive personal appearance and blessed with youth, but also of rare accomplishments, acquired and natural. In any of the courts of our city, so often the horizons where the cherished hopes and anticipations that first dawn upon married die receive an early eclipse, and set, never te rise again, the proceedings in this case would attract hundreds used to such scenes and satisted with the recitals that depict the first step that leads from happiness to misery, but still attracted by fresh scandals and their denouements; but in the Town Hall at Jamaica, were it not for the omniscient press, the case might proceed and close and only a very few, the village lathers and the village urchins, would have a memory of it or its consequences to the parties from the moment of its disposition by the popular Judge Snedeker till the end of time. Still the case is fraught with most serious consequences to the principal actors, and the result will be as momentous to them as if they were on trial in the chief criminal court of this city.

The Charge And The testimony.

The People of the State of New York vs. Virginia W. Justh.—In this case, as above described, the counsel for the people are District Attorney B, W. Downing and Ira Shafer, the latter principally representing William Justh, and John I. Iownshend appeared for the accused.

The first witness examined was Louisa Jones, A Midwiff, and John I. Iownshend appeared for the accused.

The first witness examined was Louisa Jones, and the accused at the house of Mrs. Grindle proposed to her that she should accompany a certain lady, whom the witness dentified as Mrs. Justh, the accused, to her residence at Clear Lake Cottage, Oyster Bay, L. county. A great deal of interest is manifested in street; that Mrs. Grindle, No. 129 west Twenty-sixth street; that Mrs. Grindle, No. 120 west Twenty-sixth street; that Mrs. Grindle proposed to her that she should accompany a certain lady, whom the witness identified as Mrs. Justh, the accused, to her residence at Clear Lake Cottage, Oyster Bay, L. L.; she (the witness) consented to go, and, after repairing to her own house, took the train with Mrs. Justh for Syossett, from which she was driven to the residence of the accused; the evening after her arrival at the house she and Mrs. Justh went out for a ride to Huntington, where Mrs. Justh purchased some chlorate of lime in anticipation of a necessity which afterwards arose for its use; next evening Mrs. Justh became sick and the witness told her to go to bed; Mrs. Justh st down on the stairs and after returning to her room was delivered of a dead child, which the witness next morning, at Mrs. Justh's request, buried in the woods at the back of the house in the chlorate of time previously purchased; next day the witness was formaily discharged by Mrs. Justh, who gave her $50 and a set of cameos in lieu of $50-$100 in all—which the witness claimed as her remuneration for two weeks' services in the country; this jewelry, the witness stated, she gave to Mrs. Grindle, from whom it was afterwards redeemed, as the witness saw an advertisement in the papers which brought her to the business place of Mr. Justh, at No. 53 Exchange place, and in the interview which followed she stated that she was the person who attended Mrs. Justh in her confinement at Oyster Bay, in August; Mr. Justh, as witness stated, seemed astonished at this announcement, and rejoined that if she (the witness) did not reveal all she knew, he would have her prosecuted; this practically led to the present investigation.

THE SERVANTS TESTIMONY.

Two witnesses, servants at the celtage in Oyster ment, and rejoined that if she (the witness) did not reveal all she knew, he would have her prosecuted; this practically led to the present investigation.

THE SERVANTS TESTIMONY.

Two witnesses, servants at the ceitage in Oyster Bay, testified to the fact that the previous witness was, as they supposed, on a visit to Mrs. Justh, as a friend last August; that Mrs. Justh was sick at that time, and that Colonel Burleigh was in the habit of visiting Mrs. Justh and remaining over might at the cottage previously to that time.

Mrs. Grindle, a well-known indiwife, was next put upon the stand. She corroborated the testimony of Mrs. Jones in all the material points, except as to the identity of the accused, as the lady whom she had recommended to Mrs. Jones. She subsequently admitted that a lady had cailed at her house and redeemed a set of jewelry last fail, which had been left with her by Mrs. Jones, and which the latter stated that she had received from the lady who had been at Mrs. Grindle's in the month of August.

A Mrs. Hayman, a midwife, also testified to a conversation with Mrs. Grindle, in which the latter admitted the jewelry transaction with Mrs. Grindle went of the case from her in open court; Mrs. Grindle had teld witness that if she (Mrs. Grindle) went on the stand she could get seven years in the State Prison and that the accused dentified certain letters of the latter produced in Court. The jetter commencing, "Barling John," she falled to identify.

John E. Leycrait, residing at New York, in the employ of Justh & Co., testified—Knows Mrs. Justh; knows ter handwriting; was in the habit of paying money on her orders during her busband's absence in Europe; received one letter frem her.

Cross-examined—Never saw her write; could her tester handwriting; as in the shift of him the letters were written by her; saw letters from her with Mr. Justh; Justh told him the letters were written by her; saw letters from her with Mr. Justh; Justh told him the helter witness produced the letter; paid her considerable amo lieved, by Mrs. Justh, were identified by him and put in evidence.

Witness was subjected to a long cross-examination as to his knowledge of comparisons between the setter put in evidence for the prosecution and other letters preduced by the defence. His testimony was not shaken, however, in the slightest.

Witness continued—The letter of invitation to him from Mrs. Justh, first put in testimony, was not known to be in existence by Mr. Justh until yesterday; witness had returned it, but without purpose or design.

Mr. Tompkins, managing clerk in the office of Shafer & Co., testified—Was aware of the suits resulting between the parties in the suprementation.

witness had discovered the key to the cypher. Witness was asked to read the portions of the letters in cypher.

Mr. Townsend objected on the ground that the testimony sought to be put in was not applicable testimony sought to be put in was not applicable to the issue here, but was sought to east injurious to the issue here, but was sought to east injurious aspersions upon the defendant here, and to influence the trial for divorce which is still pending. Counsel quoted the opening of the Court of Appeals in the Mine. Restell-Mary Bodine case in support of his objection. Counsel alleged that the letters were lorgeries in themselves and ought to be excluded.

Mr. sharer contended for the reading of the letters written by detendant to the person charged with criminal complicity with her, as the statements therein contained conveyed the irresistible conviction that not only did criminal connection exist between them, but also that there was evidence in them to prove the charge more immediately at issue.

was evidence in them to prove the charge more immediately at issue.

Mr. Townsend appealed to the Court that the Court might read the letters himself and to judge of the materiality or immateriality of their contents before having them read in open Court. If not material to the issue, they might still be very injurious to the defendant, and to this extent he would leave the interests of his fair client in His Honor's hands.

The Court ordered the letters to be read by the witness. They numbered some fourteen in all, and all addressed to colonel John L. Burleigh. Portions of three or lour were in cypher, which Mr. Tompof three or lour were in cypher, which Mr. Tompof immediately and the second of three or lour were in cypher, which Mr. Tompof immediately and the second of the letters to be read by the witness.

witness. They numbered some fourteen in all, and all addressed to Colone! John L. Burleigh. Portions of three or lour were in cypher, which Mr. Tompkins was enabled to read from his key to it. The letters were not at all of the usually impassioned or ardent style that might be expected under the circumstances, associated with their production in a court of justice. They bore evidence of culture and educated taste in composition, though they contained enough to indicate a more than Platonic intimacy between the parties. Early in the reading of them the defendant's counsel asked that she might be permitted to retire, which was, of course, granted, and for the remainder of the session Mrs. Justa did not return into Court.

A BERSZE BETWEEN COUNSEL—THE LIE DIRECT.
During Mr. Townsend's cross-examination of the witness. Better he hadn't noticed, or imagined he noticed, Mr. Shaler nodding his head at the witness. Better he hadn't noticed, or imagined he noticed, anything of the sort.

Mr. Townsend—Oh, Mr. Shaler, you needn't nod or signalize to the witness.
Mr. Shaler trising in a towering passion)—I did not nod at the witness, str.
Mr. Townsend—I say I saw you.
Mr. Shaler—You lie, str. Your Insinuation is false from beginning to end, and no one but a miserable, contemptible pettilogger like you would make such an insinuation,
Mr. Townsend—Oh, you are a gentleman.
Mr. Shaler—I am, compared to you.
No spark was elicited from Townsend, and Mr. Shaler and no one but a miserable, contemptible pettilogger like you would make such an insinuation,
Mr. Townsend—Oh, you are a gentleman.
Mr. Shaler—I am, compared to you.
Mr. Shaler—I am, compared to you.
Mr. Shaler—I am, compared to you.
Mr. Compared to you.
Mr. Tompkins then proceeded with the reading of the letters. Most of them were addressed to "Dear John," and signed "Little Woman," all in the proved handwriting of Mrs. Justb.
The reading of the letters concluded the proceedings of the session, and the Court adjourned to Thursday next, at half-past nine o'clock.

NEW ORLEANS RACES.

The First Day of the Spring Meeting.

Fannie M. Wins the First Race, Fallie Watson the Pickwick Stakes, and Morgan Scout the Three-Mile Dash.

NEW ORLEANS, April 12, 1873. The prospects of a successful as well as an interesting meeting have improved vastly within the past few days. In the first place, we have had a week of magnificent weather; then a general dearth of business encourages its devotees to seek lieved that the great number of young horses entered invests the prospective results with more uncertainty than usual, thus placing the "innocents" at better advantage with the knowing ones. Last night Twambly did a brisk business with pools, and this morning betting was quite lively, though the investments were small. The programme of the day's race was a good one-first, a dash of one and three-quarter miles, with six entries; next, mile heats, with same field; and, last, a three-mile dash cent order, and the attendance exceedingly good. THE PIRST RACE, owing to one of those untoward events incidental to racing, was a very exciting one. All the entries came to the scratch—Young Harry, Sir Rufus, Mary Louise, Emma Sansom, Fannie M. and C. O. D., the last the favorite at odds of 3 to 5. Precisely at three P. M. Judge Breaux rang up the horses to the quarter-mie pole, and after one or two failures got them off well together. Young Harry in the lead, lapped by Sansom, the rest trailing in the rear. They all took it easy up to the hall-mile pole, where C. O. D. came to the fore, and rounding into the homestretch and under the string a length ahead of Sansom and Fannie M., who were strugdling desperately for first place. Sweeping the turn, Fannie M. drew ahead of her compelitor, and down the backstretch drove the tavorite hard. The struggle from here out was a splendid one, the gallant little mare holding on with great tenacity, but unable up to the finish to get her nose in front, even under the persuading influence of well piled timber. As they neared the stand the race was evidently a certain one for the horse, and the shout went up, "C. O. D. wins.—C. O. D. wins." But, alas for his backers! just as he passed the distance stand, with victory within his grasp, he suddenly balked under an unlucky cut from his jockey, lost his stride, and ere he could recover Fannie M. had swept by and under the string, winning the race in 3:13, Mary Louise second, Young Harry third, Emma Sansom fourth, C. O. D. fith and Sir Ruius Sixth.

THE SECOND RACE

was for the Pickwick Stakes, mile heats, for three-year-olds, with five competitors—Edwin Adams, Vandalia, Dumboyne, a King Lear coit and the Lively Sallie Watson—the latter standing favorite against the field at even. The start in the first heat of this race was a magnificent one. At the tap Vandalia, Dumboyne, and Watson got off shoulder to shoulder, the other two well up in the rear. Without changing this position, and all under the space of a bianket, they swept round the first half mile in desperate rivalry. At the pole Vandalia was well off, and Dumboyne and Watson got off shoulder to the space of a bianket, they swept round the first half mile in desperate rivalry. At the Louise, Emma Sansom, Fannie M. and C. O. D., the last the favorite at odds of 3 to 5. Precisely at ied home a winner by a neck in 147%, Dumboyne second, Adams third, Vandalla fourth, the other distanced.

The second heat was a very pretty one, but its story is soon told. Watson and Dumboyne got off neck and neck, giving Adams and Vandalla a very bad start. They drove one another from the start, but on the backstretch Adams put in his calim, closed the gap handsomely, and down the home run challenged the leaders. Half way in he collared and passed Dumboyne, but notwithstanding his gallant struggle, did not succeed in reaching Watson, who led home winner of the heat and race in 1:48, Adams second, Dumboyne third and Vandalla fourth.

THE LAST RACE,
and the one exciting the most interest, was a three-mile dash, for which Frank Hampton was largely the favorite against Morgan Scout, Flora McIvor and Tom Corbett. After some little difficulty the horses were gotten of, with Frank in the lead, Scout second and Flora third. In this order they trailed comfortably round into the backstretch, where Frank, whose tactics were evidently a waiting race, pulled up to the third place, and in this order they entered the second mile. Time, 1:55. Corbett now grew ambitious, went up and lelt the Scout, who shook him off at the last turn, and, without any change in position, they came down the home run at the stand. Hampton's rider now felt his time had come, let out and took the lead with the greatest ease, passing under the string in 3:49, with the Scout hanging on his flank, Corbett and Flora both well up. The supreme moment had now come, and the drive around and down the stretch between Scout and Frank was splendidly contested. Neck and neck they had it until the last turn, when the cry went up, "The Scout's got him!" and as they thundered in home, coming nearer and nearer, it proved too true. In the inset time, when the cry went up, "The Scout's got him!" and as they thundered in home, coming nearer and nearer, it proved too true. In the last turn, when the cry went up, "The Scout's got him!" and as they thundered in home, co

THE BANK OF ENGLAND FORGERY.

In the United States Circuit Court yesterday Judge Woodruff pronounced his decision on the writ of habeas corpus sued out by George McDennell, who has been charged before Commissioner Gutman with having been concerned in the recent Gutman with having been concerned in the recent frauds upon the Bank of England. The object of this writ of habeas corpus was to show that neither the complaint nor the warrant upon which the prisoner had been arrested was sufficiently specific in point of law, and that, therefore, he ought to have been discharged. The Judge's decision upholds the legality of both warrant and complaint, and remits the accused to the custody of the Marshal, so that the examination of McDonnell may recent before the Commissiones. pending between the parties in the supreme proceed before the Commission
